Committee Overview

The University Academic Integrity Committee (UAIC) is a shared governance committee that considers cases of students accused of academic misconduct and determines whether the student is responsible. The UAIC does not issue sanctions. The convening committee for an academic misconduct hearing is three faculty members and one student. For cases involving academic misconduct of a graduate student, the student representative will be a graduate student. The Committee reports to the Provost and Executive Vice Chancellor of Academic Affairs and Research.

Membership
Membership will consist of three faculty members and two undergraduates from each college, as well as one graduate student from each academic college that has a graduate program. The Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Services and the Graduate Dean will serve as ex officio members. The committee elects a chair at the beginning of each academic year.
